Joy, invigoration, and enlightenment are among the rewards of focused disciplines such as Tai Chi and yoga. This is also true of music; and especially chamber music with its dance-like interplay of parts. Audiences can reap these rewards in the company of the artists. The shared experience of a concert performance brings magic to our lives. Founder and pianist Alice Coleman knew this, and brought chamber music to our community. Today her legacy encompasses concert audiences with phenomenal artists, young ensembles with a major competition, and children with school outreach activities.

With music spanning five centuries, Coleman’s 105th concert season celebrates several milestones. A total of 20 works (11 of them new to Coleman audiences) by 12 composers features music from Purcell’s King Arthur 350 years after his birth; Handel’s Water Music 250 years following his death; and two of Haydn’s Opus 76 quartets, wondrously vital 200 years after his death. Music of the 21st century includes the Southern California premiere of Wuorinen’s second piano quintet (written for the artists; the world premiere is in June 2008) and Harbison’s Short Stories, also written for the artists.

All this and more await you…

* First Coleman Chamber Concert performance
How better could Coleman audiences and the Guarneri String Quartet say “farewell” than with a celebration of Beethoven’s late quartets? This will be the Quartet’s 18th and final appearance on the Series, the most of any artists but the Juilliard and London String Quartets, and Alice Coleman herself. Retiring after a 45-year run, the group began with the 1964 Marlboro Music Festival, when violinists Arnold Steinhardt and John Dalley, violist Michael Tree, and cellist David Soyer joined forces fresh out of the Curtis Institute of Music (Soyer’s protégé Peter Wiley replaced him in 2001). “Quite possibly the most distinguished string quartet in the solar system,” (Salt Lake Tribune) the Quartet has now become an interstellar musical ambassador with a recording aboard NASA’s Voyager 2 spacecraft.

Definitive... no other single word more aptly describes the achievement by this superb foursome.” (Chicago Tribune) Established in 1972 by students at the Prague Conservatory, the Quartet soon won several awards, including first prize at the Evian String Quartet Competition in 1978. Its recordings have also won many honors, among them a special prize from Radio France for the best recording during the Evian Competition, the Grand Prix International du Disque, and the Diapason d’Or. The Quartet returns to the Series with violist Roger Tapping, a member of the Order of the Knight Cross of the Hungarian Republic and known to Coleman audiences from his tenure with the Takács Quartet.

Haydn
Janáček
Brahms

Quartet in D Major, Op. 76, No. 5
Quartet No. 2 “Intimate Letters”
Quartet No. 3 in B-flat Major, Op. 67

This will be the Tokyo String Quartet’s 12th Coleman concert, including the Centennial concert in 2004, since winning the Vera Barstow Award at the 1970 Competition. In 1995 the ensemble began performing with the “Paganini Quartet,” a group of renowned Stradivarius instruments named for legendary virtuoso Niccolò Paganini, who acquired and played them during the 19th century. The Toronto Star said of the Quartet’s playing that “The musicians displayed such finesse, such careful shaping of each melodic line as it was passed from one instrument to the next, that it left one almost breathless.” Their numerous television appearances include Sesame Street, PBS’s Great Performances, and CNN This Morning.

Symphony No. 48 in C Major “Maria Theresia”

Handel
Water Music Suite No.1 in F Major, HWV 348

Handel

Handel
Water Music Suite No. 2 in D Major, HWV 349

Founded in 1984 by music director Bernard Labadie and strongly influenced by current research into performance practice in the 17th and 18th centuries, Les Violons du Roy is a pillar of the musical scene in Québec City. International tours have prompted critical response that “The orchestra’s playing... was something of a revelation.” (Washington Post) Writing in classics today.com, David Vernier says “For years I’ve been singing the praises of this superb orchestra and conductor... but I’ll say it one more time: if you haven’t heard Les Violons du Roy, then you haven’t heard one of the world’s top-three Baroque-music orchestras. And Labadie deserves the acclaim and respect routinely assigned to such conductors as Koopman, Harnoncourt, and Herreweghe.”

Such was their ferocity on Saturday night that the instruments almost burst into flames.... Make no mistake: the Brentanos are a magnificent string quartet.... This was wonderful, selfless music making.” (The Times of London) Named for Antonie Brentano, whom many scholars consider to be Beethoven’s “Immortal Beloved,” the Quartet began in 1992 and within a few years won the Naumberg Chamber Music Award and the inaugural Cleveland Quartet Award. The artists maintain a strong interest in commissioning new music, the latest of which is Charles Wuorinen’s second piano quintet. Celebrated pianist Peter Serkin joins the Quartet to bring this new composition to audiences across America.

In winning the grand prize at the Yellow Springs National Competition they were described as having “A musical unity that seemed extraordinary. The Amelia Piano Trio has a distinctive style all their own. Their prize was richly deserved.” (Yellow Springs News) From their inception in 1997 the artists have been dedicated to music education, and all are now professors at the Hartt School of Music and Connecticut College. Their commitment to new music has led to such commissions as the Harbison trio, and to the ASCAP Award for Adventurous Programming. “Violinist Anthea Kreston, cellist Jason Duckles, and pianist Rieko Aizawa are each superb in their own right. Together they make music that is daring, lively, and completely engrossing.” (Seattle Times)
You are cordially invited to join the 63rd annual Coleman Chamber Ensemble Competition, in which young musicians from schools and conservatories across the nation and abroad bring their remarkable talents before a distinguished panel of judges. Saturday, April 25, 2009 in Caltech’s Ramo Auditorium, finalists will compete for the $7,500 Alice Coleman Prize, the $4,000 Coleman-Barstow Prize for Strings, and the $4,000 Coleman-Saunderson Prize for Winds or Brass. The Competition is open to the public and audiences are welcome, free of charge. Prizewinners will be presented in concert Sunday, April 26, 2009, at 3:30 p.m.

Since 1947, the Competition has helped launch the careers of such prizewinners as Glenn Dicterow; Grant Gershon; Jeffrey Kahane; Anne-Marie McDermott; Paula Robison; Nathaniel Rosen; Morton Subotnick; the Ahn and Janaki trios; eighth blackbird; and the Calder, Colorado, Pacifica, Tokyo, and Vega quartets. Judges have included some of the finest musicians of their time: Jascha Heifetz; Natalie Limonick; Mehli Mehta; Gregor Piatigorsky; Artur Rubinstein; Eudice Shapiro; Arnold Steinhardt; Henri Temianka; the Beaux Arts Trio; and the Amadeus, Budapest, Opus One, and Smetana quartets. From its origins encouraging local students in junior, intermediate, and senior divisions, the Competition has evolved to earn and confer international prestige.

Alice Coleman conducted lecture-demonstrations and master classes for years, fulfilling her “desire to be identified with the musical growth of my childhood home, Pasadena.” In 1955 her Association established the Assembly Room Concerts to provide exciting musical experiences for hundreds of children in Pasadena and San Gabriel Valley schools each year. Now known as Meet the Musicians, the program’s artists in 2009 will be the Avanti String Quartet. With this initiative inspiring tomorrow’s audiences and the Competition launching young artists’ careers, Coleman is fostering the future of the music it celebrates in its concerts today.
